Daily Report

Summary

- The USA imposed import tariffs on steel and aluminium products from the EU, Canada and Mexico, from today.
- Trade war fears and the political crisis in Spain steered investors towards risk-free assets.
- Labour market statistics are due out in the USA today.

Wednesday's lull on the world's stock markets did not last long. On Thursday US Commerce Secretary Wilbur Ross announced to impose 10% import tariff on aluminium products and 25% duty on steel products from the EU, Canada and Mexico on Friday – the tariff measures announced two months ago will apply to these countries as well. The announcement sent the share prices of US steel and aluminium producers higher, while the rise in purchase prices hit a number of manufacturing industries. Since the announcement in March, US steelmakers have raised their prices by nearly 30%, market sources say. Among the knock-on effects, analysts mentioned the higher price of building projects, the rising inflation, and the shrinking US exports owing to the retaliation measures, thus a slowing of economic growth. On the London Commodity Exchange, aluminium price rose 1% by the close, while US hot rolled steel prices jumped more than 4% yesterday; the product has surge 39% year to date. But the increase in a few raw material producers was not enough for US benchmarks to climb into positive territory. The S&P was 0.7% down by the close (all sector indices fell, except utilities), the Dow fell 1% and NASDAQ100 shed 0.1%.

Amid the broadening gloom on Europe's stock markets again, the Stoxx600 dropped 0.6%, and the FTSE closed 0.2% down, wiping off the day's earlier gains. The DAX sank 1.4%, the CAC40 dipped 0.5%, while the Spanish benchmark slid 1% by the end of Thursday's trading. In Spain, the centre-left Socialist party won support of the parliamentary majority to seek no-confidence motion against Prime Minister Mariano Rajoy.

In the corporate world, Deutsche Bank slumped more than 4% yesterday, returning from an intraday 7% plunge, when it hit its lowest on record. S&P downgraded the bank's rating to BBB+, maintaining the stable outlook.

In the month/month terms, the FTSE gained 2.3% in May, the DAX shed 0.1%, the CAC40 lost 2.2%, the Spanish index fell more than 5%, and Italy's index nose-dived 9% last month. The Stoxx600 declined 0.6% over the past month, reversing its 4% surge in April.

In Central and Eastern Europe, Poland was closed on national holiday, and the Czech PX slipped 0.3%. The BUX's 1.5% gain owed a lot to OTP's 1% growth (its strong turnover gave two-thirds of the nearly HUF 38 billion trading volume), to Mol's 2.7% rally, and to Richter's 1.2% increase. MTelekom dropped 0.5%. The BUX lost nearly 8% in May.

On the currency market, the EUR/USD stayed flat. The GBP's advance against the USD continued. The EUR/HUF settled near Wednesday's 319 level. As risk aversion intensified, demand for relatively safe assets has risen, pushing the US 10Y bond yield below 2.84%, while the German and British 10Y bond yields came down three basis points each.

This morning Asia's stock markets closed mixed. The Nikkei inched 0.1% higher. South Korea's index was also seen in positive territory, possibly benefiting from the better-than-expected exports data. On the other hand, mainland China and Hong Kong ended in the red.

It seems that after all, Giuseppe Conte, a candidate of the Five Star Movement (M5S) will be Italy's Prime Minister, and the leaders of the two populist parties, M5S and the League may become Deputy Prime Minister and Minister. The League's nominee for Finance Minister is professor of economic policy Giuseppe Tria, and the Minister in charge of EU issues will be the Eurosceptic Paolo Savona, whom the president had already vetoed once.

Today's most important publication is the May employment report from the USA. In the afternoon, the new Italian government may be sworn in, and tonight Moody's will reveal the result of its review of Hungary's debt rating.

 Investments in financial instruments carry a certain degree of risk, which may affect the effectiveness of the investment decision, and investors may not receive the whole amount they expected the investment to yield in their investment targets; they may not preserve even the invested amount, therefore the invested capital might even decrease, be wholly lost, or even lead to additional payment obligation.
- 7. Trading with leveraged products (such as foreign exchange contracts) or with shares and indices that have underlying products carries a considerable amount of risk, and these products are not suitable for all investors. Trading with leveraged products carries the risk of losing all capital, and it may incur losses that exceed the amount invested.
- 8. The figures and information described herein refer to yields or changes in the past. Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future yields, changes, or performance. The changes on money and capital markets, the fluctuation of prices, the development of investments and their yields are influenced by the combined effect of multiple factors; one important factor of them is the change in investors' expectations. The development of prices, the future yield of financial assets, indices or indicators, the examination of their changes, trends, and future performance is based on estimations and forecasts, which forecasts do not allow reliable conclusions to be drawn about the future moves of prices, real future yields, changes, or performance. For each product and service, please assess their tax accounting implications, and other tax consequences, taking into account that they cannot be precisely assessed without knowing the effective tax regulations or the client's individual circumstances; and these legislative provisions as well as the circumstances may change over time.
