

OTP Morning Brief

- Despite the optimism on Europe's stock markets, the BUX closed flat
- The MNB's Deputy Governor Márton Nagy has resigned
- The euro strengthened against the dollar
- Precious metal and raw material prices have risen

Despite the optimism in Europe, the BUX flat-lined

Thursday's trading was fairly buoyant on both sides of the Atlantic. In the CEE region, Poland's WIG20 rose 0.6% while the BUX nearly closed flat, underperforming its peers. OTP surged 2.3%, MTelekom upped 0.3%, while Richter fell 2.6% and MOL dipped 0.3%.

Europe's stock exchanges had a good day: Germany's DAX rose by 1.1%, the CAC40 advanced 1.8%, and Britain's FTSE100 gained 0.9%. In Spain, retail sales nose-dived more than 30% year-on-year in April, reflecting the huge economic fallout from coronavirus lockdown measures. Italy's consumer confidence index was better than expected, amid the optimism surrounding the reopening of the economy.

At next week's interest rate decision meeting, the ECB may increase the size of its asset purchase programme again, by around EUR 500 billion, analysts polled by Bloomberg opine. This would bring the total amount to EUR 1.6 trillion. This may be necessary because the President of the ECB did not rule out that the eurozone's GDP may contract by as much as 8-12% this year.

Renault is laying off nearly 15,000 people worldwide, to save EUR 2 billion in three years.

US trading sentiment went sour by the end of the day

In the USA, the S&P500 shed 0.2%, the Nasdaq100 dropped 0.3%, while the Russell2000, the index small-cap businesses, fell 2.5%. Within the S&P500, the utilities and healthcare sub-sectors excelled, while cyclical consumer goods and energy underperformed.

According to the second estimate of Q1 GDP, the US economy fell by a more-than-expected 5% (quarter/quarter, annualized), whereas the previously estimate was 4.8% drop. Initial jobless claims hit 2.1 million. Although fewer and fewer Americans lose their jobs each week (there were six million job losses at the peak), the current figure is still unusually high. Pending home sales fell by a third in April, missing expectations by a large margin: analysts had expected half of that decline.

The MNB accepted more bids than expected at yesterday's one-week deposit auction

In yesterday's collateralized loan tender, the MNB accepted HUF 70 billion of the bids submitted for HUF 281 billion, exclusively at the five-year maturity. Together with next week's transactions, the total volume will be nearing HUF 1,040 billion.

Thursday's 3Y auction was more than twice oversubscribed and the 5Y auction was nearly 1.5 times oversubscribed. The average yield at the 3Y instrument was 1.26%, for the 5Y it was 1.68%. In Thursday's trading, yields on 3M and 6M government securities upped 2-3 basis points, while the long end of the yield curve barely changed.

The MNB's Deputy Governor Márton Nagy has resigned. In the interim, managing director Barnabás Virág will replace him.

The forint weakened 0.3% against the euro in yesterday's trading, but strengthened 0.4% versus the dollar due to a shift in the EUR/USD.

In bond markets, Portuguese, Spanish and Italian 10Y bond yields came down 6-9 basis points; there was no significant shift in German and US bond yields.

The euro firmed 0.7% against the US dollar and 0.5% versus the British pound. The price of gold upped by 0.6% and that of silver by 0.7%. Brent grew by 1.6% and WTI surged 2.7%. Copper's price rose 1.3%.

Today's highlights

This morning, trading on Asian stock exchanges lacked a single direction. Many European countries will release detailed GDP data today. Euro area inflation data, US personal spending and income statistics, and the Chicago Purchasing Managers' Index will see the light of day today.

News about Hong Kong and on the USA-China tension may also move the markets today. The Fed's Chairman Jerome Powell will participate in a question & answer event.
